Preservation Education: ON DEMAND!

While many of you have taken the opportunity to come down to Preservation to ask for information or advice, did you know that Preservation is willing to come to your organization? If you're embarking on a new project, orienting recent hires, or dealing with an acquisition of an unfamiliar format, Preservation can develop a workshop that caters to your needs. Whether you have a single staff member or a group of 12, we can present information and hands-on techniques to solve your preservation challenge—or prepare you for a future challenge!

Potential workshop topics include:

- Storing and handling fragile collections materials
- Housekeeping in the stacks
- Disaster planning—
 - Risk assessment and mitigation
 - Continuity of service plan
 - Identification of high value materials
- Disaster response—
 - Drying wet collections
 - Mold remediation
 - Stack draping
- Identifying photographic processes
- Unframing paper-based items
- Exhibit mounting and guidelines

The Center for Jewish History will provide hand-outs, samples, and examples free of charge. Workshops only take 30-60 minutes and can be provided at a time and place that suits your organization's schedule. For more information or to set up your first workshop, please contact us!
